OBITUARY

Professor Joanna Boehnert

It is with great sadness and an enormous sense of loss that we report the tragic death of Professor Joanna Boehnert who died April 26 in a road accident in New Hampshire. A faculty member at the University of Guelph in Canada since 1968 and founder of the University of Guelph women's studies program, Professor Boehnert was on sabbatical and visiting family in the United States with her husband, retired history professor Gunnar Boehnert, when the accident occurred. In addition to her husband, she is survived by two daughters, Jody and Jennifer.

An MA graduate of the University of Iowa and PhD graduate of the University of Toronto, Joanna Boehnert taught at the University of Toronto and the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education before joining the University of Guelph. Known as a dedicated teacher, Joanna took the University's learning objectives to heart and instilled them in her students within and beyond the precincts of the University of Guelph. She became renowned for her work in the psychology of women and established the University's women's studies program in 1979. She served as Co-ordinator of the program for the next 14 years.

Dr. Boehnert also served as a member of the Ontario Confederation of Faculty Associations' Status of Women Committee, Chair of the University of Guelph's Faculty Association's Status of Women Committee, and Co-ordinator of the Canadian Psychological Association Section on Women and Psychology in 1999/2000. While in this last position, she initiated efforts to enhance and facilitate cooperation with Division 35, efforts that culminated in the formal designation of a SWAP/Division 35 liaison.

Professor Boehnert co-ordinated the Guelph-London semester in 1990 and the Guelph Karkow Semester Committee in 1995. Since 1996 she has been Chair of the Krakow study-abroad program. She also served as the Graduate Coordinator in the Department of Psychology from 1997 to 2000.

A memorial fund has been established in Professor Boehnert's name to create a scholarship in women's studies at the University of Guelph and a prize in women's studies at Wilfrid Laurier University.

To contribute to the fund, send a cheque payable to "University of Guelph Re: Joanna Boehnert Memorial Fund" to development officer Tim Mau in the Dean's office of the College of Social and Applied Human Sciences.

COORDINATOR'S MESSAGE

The sudden death of Joanna Boehnert, who was killed in a road accident in April while visiting in New Hampshire, was a shock to us all. Although I only got to know Joanna this past year, as the emails flew between us over mundane and important matters, I came to appreciate her thoughtful caring manner, and encouraging words. Joanna was a member of SWAP from its very inception. We have lost a valued colleague and friend who made a significant contribution to women and psychology. Joanna will be with us in spirit at this year's conference in Ste-Foy.

I hope you are planning to attend the conference - - Ste-Foy is only 10 minutes from the heart of Quebec City. Although I have not always attended CPA's annual conference, succumbing to the need for either a more specialized or international conference, I feel strongly about maintaining a Canadian identity! For those of you attending the conference in June, you have the added bonus of enjoying the St. John the Baptist Day celebrations on the weekend.

We are thrilled to offer both our regular SWAP program as well as a SWAP pre-conference Institute.

Thanks to those of you who submitted abstracts to the CPA program and the Institute, we have a very rich program of workshops, symposium, posters, and conversation sessions. I hope all of you will plan to attend as much of the SWAP program as possible.

Activities planned for the 2001 Convention include a CPA Invited Address from Lenore Walker titled: "Beyond the psychological impact of trauma: New assessment, treatment and forensic interventions when women experience violence." Thursday morning, Natalie Rinfret, University of Quebec, will present a Section keynote address entitled: "Are women in management agents of change?" This will be followed by a symposium moderated by, Connie Kristiansen (Carleton University) entitled: "Multiple lives, multiple subjectivities: Feminist psychology examines the interactions." I also hope to see many of you at our business meeting held Friday, June 22, 11:00 - 12:25. Please send me any agenda items you would like included.

The SWAP Pre-conference Institute was organized by Joanne Gallivan, Nicole Brown, and myself. Workshops, discussion sessions, and symposiums are organized around the theme of the Institute: "Women's lives: Visions, culture, and context." We are pleased to have Mona Abbondanza give a keynote address entitled "Women's work lives: Management, culture, and context." It promises to be a day of connecting and reconnecting around issues relevant to feminist scholars and practitioners.

I want to thank all of the members of the Executive, who provided support and encouragement to me throughout the year. I hope I can be as supportive to my successor Diane Priebe. One of my motivations for taking on the role of Coordinator was to become better acquainted with my fellow SWAP members. That was a real bonus of the job - I certainly feel more connected with and knowledgeable about feminist psychology in Canada.

Last year in Ottawa, as Past Coordinator, Joanna handed over the files to me (or at least what I could carry with me!), sending two rather large boxes by mail a month later. We sat together for an hour or so while she patiently explained what had to be done by when. One of Joanna's final tasks as Past Coordinator was to find a slate of officers for the annual meeting in June.

Good news from our Secretary/Treasurer, Noreen Stuckless, who informed me that financially we are in good shape, largely due to reduced costs of the Newsletter, increased membership, and a budget surplus from the Halifax Institute.

Renee Cormier, our Newsletter Editor has done a super job of producing the Newsletter, and even took up the challenge of developing a website for SWAP -- she is our official web mistress. I expect that over time our website will become an important means of communication for our members.

Maria Gurevich organized the Review of Abstracts and Charlene Senn was responsible for the Student Paper and Travel awards. Thanks to you both for your continued contribution.

It was exciting to have Sandra Pyke take on the role of Monitor with Division 35, APA's Society for the Psychology of Women. As a consequence several initiatives have been developed to facilitate collaboration and communication between the Div. and SWAP.

As members of SWAP, a big thank you for your continued support for the Section, and I encourage you to get involved. We need you as provincial representatives, as members of the Executive, as presenters at the next conference or Institute, and to encourage others to join!

It has been my pleasure to be your Coordinator this past year, and I hope to see you in Ste-Foy in June.

Coordinator

EDITOR'S MESSAGE

Well, it's hard to believe that it's been one year already since I've taken on the task of SWAP's Newsletter Editor. I'd like to take this opportunity to offer my condolences to the family and friends of Joanna Boerhnart. This terrible accident came as a shock to many.

I'd like to thank Bonnie Long for her hard work and her support over the last year. Welcome to Diane Priebe - - the new SWAP coordinator.

I'm excited to announce that, while it is still under construction, the SWAP web page is available for viewing at www.cpa.ca/swap. While the newsletter is currently available electronically as either a WordPerfect or MS Word file, I hope to make it available in PDF form soon. If you are interested in receiving the newsletter electronically, please contact me.

Unfortunately I will not be attending the CPA conference this year, but I hope that you all enjoy the event and the city.

FEMINIST REVIEW

Archibald, L., & Crnkovich, M. (1999). If Gender Mattered: A Case Study of Inuit Women, Land Claims and the Voisey's Bay Nickel Project. Ottawa, ON: Status of Women Canada, pp. 40.

Reviewed by Jennifer A. Boisvert

This report proved to be a most interesting read of how gender issues, otherwise hidden deep within policies and processes may be brought to the surface to explore their profound influence on women and their families, their communities, and their lands. Specifically, the purpose of this text is to examine critically and expose the gender equality issues hidden within the land claims and environmental assessment processes under way in Labrador. As such, this paper differs from other Status of Women Canada publications in that it is more "heartfelt" than "hands on." Rather than offering principles and strategies for change via application of gender-based analysis, this text provides the reader with a rich, detailed insight of implementing this approach within the context of the Voisey's Bay nickel project.

Given that the primary focus of this text is to illuminate the benefits of conducting feminist and community-based action research, it would be of interest to scholars, researchers, and policy-makers. As a resource tool, it would be of interest to educators, service providers, or community activists, as well as those working alongside Aboriginal women in view of its goal to better understand their personal, communal, and socioeconomic needs. Although written in an easy-to-read style, this report contains historical, legal, and technical information that may be daunting to readers whom are not familiar with the need to explore the relevance of gender-based analysis within this framework. The authors should be credited for their efforts in making this text relatively jargon-free and achieving its purpose to enhance readers' knowledge in this area.

Despite its brevity, this report is comprised of three parts, thus providing the reader with a good sense of the project as a whole. The first section, "Aboriginal Land Claims and the Federal Policy" takes an in-depth exploration of land claim policies. The reader is provided with background information outlining the origin of land claim policies for their pertinence to Aboriginal women today. The significance of land claims, that is, their purpose, scope, nature, and absence of gender-based analysis are addressed in detail, but not to the extent of overwhelming the reader. The second section, "Environmental Assessment" examines the federal responsibility for environmental assessment, their role in conducting an assessment relative to project proposal, funding, and placement on federal lands. The reader's attention is drawn to how projects, such as the Voisey's Bay nickel mine/mill development are subject to the assessment procedures set out in federal and provincial laws. Apart from addressing the influence of environmental assessment policies and procedures on the Voisey's Bay project, the authors take care to make clear the implications of this process on the lives of Inuit women residing in Labrador. Finally, this report concludes with both general and specific recommendations of possible policy options and future research directions to address gender and cultural issues. It is in this final section that the "heart" of this text is presented; the text is almost diary-like, giving "voice" to the hopes and fears that Inuit women conveyed about the Voisey's Bay project. The value of conducting feminist and community action-research is evidenced as a consequence of conducting gender-based analysis and enhancing Inuit women's representation and participation throughout federal law processes.

In sum, this report provides the reader with useful information regarding the need to address further concerns and issues in a manner respectful towards Aboriginal tradition and culture. Within this broader context, there is considerable work to be undertaken regarding land claims and environmental policies within the federal government to ensure that the needs of Inuit women are accounted for. The necessity of acknowledging gender equality in federal policy is apparent, given its function to promote and support equality of women as a unifying factor within their communities and the larger Canadian society.

ASSOCIATION FOR RESEARCH
ON MOTHERING (ARM)
Conference: Examining and Expanding the Meanings of MOTHERLOVE
York University
Toronto, Canada
Feb 16, 2002

Deadline: Oct. 15, 2001

In celebration of Valentine's Day, ARM is planning a one day conference on Motherlove where we hope to expand the meanings of love beyond the narrow conceptions of heterosexual romantic love most often associated with Valentine's Day. In our exploration of motherlove, this conference seeks to critically examine and challenge commonly held perceptions of what constitutes motherlove. The conferences also aims to broaden traditional definitions of motherlove to include a wide range of experiences and interpretations in order to destabilize and unsettle our culture's limited and limiting meanings of motherlove. We welcome submissions from a variety of perspectives and disciplines. Cross-cultural and comparative work is encouraged. We also welcome creative reflections such as: poetry, short stories, and artwork on the subject.

Topics can include, but are not limited to:

- * Historical construction and development of the idea of motherlove
- * Sentimentalization and naturalization of motherlove
- * Bad mothers and motherlove
- * Self love vs. motherlove
- * Motherlove and maternal subjectivity
- * The reproduction of motherlove
- * Challenging boundaries and contesting meanings of motherlove
- * Motherlove and feminist psychoanalytic theory
- * Conceptions of motherlove within attachment theory
- * Madonna and child: the paradigm of motherlove in the West
- * Eros and motherlove: sensuality, tenderness, empathy
- * Motherlove through different ages and stages
- * Grandmotherlove
- * Deconstructing 'perfect' motherlove
- * Discourses of 'tough' motherlove
- * Motherlove and child development

- * Motherloving daughters and sons
- * Feminist mothering: challenging patriarchal discourses of good mothering
- * Representations of motherlove in art and literature
- * Cross cultural differences in mothering and motherlove

If you are interested in being considered as a presenter, please send a 250 word abstract and a 50 word bio by October 15, 2001 to:

6th annual conference on Mothering, Law, Politics and Public Policy
York University, Toronto, Canada
October 18-20 2002
Deadline: Aug. 1, 2001

The position and experience of mothers in contemporary societies is significantly affected by various forms of legal and political regulation. The political and legal contexts in which mothers live shape the choices that they make about their mothering. This conference will explore, from a variety of perspectives and disciplines, the impact of laws and policies on the experience of mothering. It will examine the formulation and implementation of public policies affecting mothers as well as mothers' responses to and experiences of these policies. The various positions mothers may occupy in the realm of law, politics and public policy will also be considered. We welcome submissions from students, activists, scholars, policy makers, artists and others who research in this area. Cross-cultural and comparative work is encouraged.

Topics can include, but are not limited to:

- * Surrogate motherhood and reproductive technologies
- * Maternity and parental leave
- * Workplace benefits
- * The "work-family dilemma"
- * Adoption policies
- * Mothers as politicians
- * First Nations/aboriginal mothers
- * Immigrant and refugee mothers
- * Race and racism in law and policies affecting mothers
- * Child custody
- * Child support and spousal support
- * Breastfeeding: legal and public policy considerations
- * Child care
- * Income tax rules relating to dependents
- * Issues for lesbian/bi/trans/queer mothers
- * Challenges facing mothers with disabilities, or mothers caring for children with disabilities
- * Child protection legislation
- * Social security for mothers

- * Home-based mothering
- * Mothers and grassroots organizing
- * Incarcerated mothers and mothers in the criminal justice system

There will also be 'Open Stream' Sessions on the General Topic of Mothering -Motherhood.

If you are interested in being considered as a presenter, please send a 250 word abstract and a 50 word bio by August 1, 2001 to:

JOURNAL OF BISEXUALITY
Special Issue: Current Research on Bisexuality
Guest Editor: Ron Fox

Deadline: June 1, 2001

Looking for original empirical research and reviews of particular aspects of the research literature on bisexuality for a special issue of the Journal of Bisexuality focusing on current research on bisexuality. Examples include psychological, sociological, or anthropological research on: bisexual identities; bisexual relationships and families; attitudes toward bisexual women and bisexual men; bisexual communities; bisexuality and ethnic, racial and cultural diversity; bisexuality and HIV/AIDS; bisexuality and transgender persons; bisexual youth; and mental health services and bisexual women and bisexual men.

Deadlines:

A 500 word abstract is required by June 1, 2001. For empirical research, include in the abstract a description of the research topic and sample, methodology (e.g. questionnaire, interview, etc.), most important findings, and how the research relates to the existing literature on the topic. For reviews of the literature, include an overview of how the topic has been looked at historically and in terms of theory and existing research, and indicate future directions for research in this area of bisexuality. Final manuscripts of those selected by the editor will be due by August 15, 2001.

Inquiries are welcomed by the editor, and submission guidelines are available via email to: ronfox@firstworld.net or by sending a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Ron Fox, Ph.D., P.O. Box 210491, San Francisco, CA 94121-0491.

About the Editor:

Ron Fox, Ph.D., is a San Francisco based psychotherapist, researcher, author, and educator. He has conducted a large-scale study of bisexual identity development and has published several chapters on bisexual issues in LGB psychology books. He has presented workshops, classes, and in-service trainings on sexual diversity and bisexual issues at professional conferences, graduate schools, and community agencies, and at regional, national, and international bisexual conferences. He serves as a member of the editorial board of the Journal of Bisexuality, and he is also involved in the American Psychological Association's Division 44 (Society for the Psychological Study of LGB Issues) as Co-Chair of the Committee on Bisexual Issues in Psychology. He was a member of the Task Force that wrote the recently adopted APA Guidelines for Psychotherapy with Lesbian, Gay, and Bisexual Clients.

About the Journal:

Harrington Park Press, an imprint of The Haworth Press, Inc., publishes the new Journal of Bisexuality, edited by Fritz Klein, M.D. Interest in bisexuality is on the rise. Poll after poll indicates that professionals and nonprofessional have some type of increased involvement with bisexuality, either on a professional or personal level.

The Journal of Bisexuality is the first professional quarterly to publish both professional articles and serious essays on bisexuality and its meaning for the individual, the community, and society. Areas of coverage include: current research into bisexuality, different bisexual lifestyles, examining the myths of nonexistence and nonmonogamy, differences from and difficulties with the lesbian/gay and straight communities, bisexual history, growth of bisexual activism, describing various bisexual subcultures throughout the world, and reviews of books and films dealing with bisexuality.

This intelligent journal is intended for more than the academic audience. While researchers will be published in a special peer reviewed section, other sections of the Journal cover bisexual topics in a more popular and nonacademic style. With its wide audience scope and the range of issues discussed, the Journal of Bisexuality is ideal for both academic and public libraries who want to offer their patrons the latest information on the topic of bisexuality.

CANADIAN JOURNAL OF COMMUNITY MENTAL HEALTH
Special Issue (Fall 2002):
Innovation in Community
Mental Health: International Perspectives

Submission Deadline: Oct. 1, 2001

Submissions are invited for a special issue of the Journal on innovative psychosocial or recovery based community mental health programs across the world. Papers describing programmes and policy developments taking place outside of Canada addressing the concrete, practical problems and needs of persons with mental health problems, and/or mental health programme funding and network/system development, are sought. Submissions focusing on, but not limited to, such topics as innovative resource deployment (housing, income, accompaniment, peer support) social network construction/reconstruction, stigma reduction/ conscientization will be considered. Papers describing concrete ways in which population health issues and/or power/powerlessness/empowerment issues have been addressed within a community mental health approach are also of interest.

The purpose of the special issue is to bring to readers of the Journal perspectives that differ from Canadian practice so as to challenge our own capacity for innovation. Submissions may include descriptions of exemplary programmes, policy analyses, theoretical articles, research reports, literature reviews and reviews of relevant books. Please follow the instructions to contributors in the most recent issue of the journal. These instructions are also available on our website (and from the guest editors for this issue). Individuals intending to submit papers are encouraged to contact the editors listed below to assess the appropriateness of proposed submissions. Deadline for complete submissions is October 1, 2001. Early submissions and inquiries will be appreciated.

WOMEN & THERAPY
Special Issue: Constructing Exercise and Sport as Therapeutic Modalities

EXTENSION OF DEADLINE: June 30, 2001

We are interested in receiving additional articles on the use of exercise and sport as an adjunct to therapy for our Women & Therapy volume entitled "Constructing Exercise and Sport as Therapeutic Modalities." This edition will explore the healing use of sport and exercise from several therapeutic orientations within a feminist context. We are particularly interested in a paper that addresses the relationship of physical activity and sport to psychopharmacology, the traditional biological intervention. We are also interested in articles that integrate exercise with varied therapeutic orientations including a psychodynamic, cognitive-behavioral, feminist and spiritual dimension. Papers can also address a therapists work with athletes.

Papers are to be no more than 20 pages in length (includes figures, graphics and references): Please use 12 point Times Roman font and APA style. Include three copies of your paper and a copy of your paper on a disc formatted for IBM PCs. Include your name, address, phone number, fax number and email address and your preferred means of being contacted by us. Your paper must not have been published elsewhere. If you would like additional information, please feel free to contact either of us. We look forward to hearing from you.

NATIONAL WOMEN'S STUDIES
ASSOCIATION
Special Issue: Feminist
Disability Studies

Deadline: June 1, 2001

The NWSA Journal announces a special issue on Feminist Disability Studies to be guest edited by Kim Q. Hall.

Both disability studies and feminist studies have often marginalized and/or ignored disabled women. Within disability studies the figure of the emasculated disabled man has often been the paradigm for critiques of discrimination. And while the body has figured prominently within feminist theory, the body of the disabled woman has often been invisible in the midst of what Susan Wendell has called the "disciplinary practices of physical control" and "disciplines of normality" that have characterized many discussions of embodiment within feminist theory. Feminist disability studies has emerged in response to these erasures, and in the process has become a site for rethinking conceptions of the body and identity that have informed both feminist and disability studies.

Contributors are encouraged to send scholarly papers on these and other topics concerning feminism and disability:

- * What is feminist disability studies?
- * race and disability
- * queer theory and disability studies
- * gender, public policy, and disability
- * class and disability
- * body image and disability
- * feminist theory and disability
- * ageing and disability

Send three double-spaced copies of your 20-30 page manuscript, formatted according to the Chicago Manual of Style (14th edition), complete with abstract, parenthetical notes and references to:

Kim Hall
Assistant Professor, Philosophy
Associate Editor, NWSA Journal
Appalachian State University

For further information, please contact Kim Hall at hallki@appstate.edu or (828)262-6817.

All papers for the special issue will be peer reviewed.
