CALL FOR NOMINATIONS

Nominations for the position of Coordinator-Elect are currently being accepted. The position involves a four-year commitment: one year as Coordinator-Elect, two years as Coordinator, and one year as Past Coordinator. This position will be filled by means of a membership vote at the Annual SWAP Business Meeting in Montreal in June 2005. Letters of nominations of self or others should be sent to Elizabeth Church, Past Coordinator, by March 31, 2005.

COORDINATOR'S MESSAGE

Happy New Year! I hope you all had a wonderful holiday season and feel energized, exhilarated and excited to see what lies ahead in the upcoming year. Two reasons for being excited about the New Year are the upcoming CPA convention in Montreal, June 9 – 11, and the SWAP pre-CPA Institute, June 8, both of which are looking great. And a third reason for being happy is Elizabeth's Church's success in gaining a seat on CPA's Board of Directors!

Convention Plans

CPA invited speaker. Dr. Rhoda Unger will be a CPA invited speaker co-sponsored by SWAP, the Section on the History and Philosophy of Psychology and the Section on Social and Personality Psychology. Dr. Unger retired as Professor Emerita of Psychology in 1998 after 26 years of teaching at Montclair State University. Since then she has been a Resident Scholar in Women's Studies at Brandeis University in Massachusetts. Over the years Dr. Unger has made an outstanding contribution to women and psychology. By my count, she has published nine books on the psychology of women/gender and 67 articles/book chapters on topics such as 'Women as actors and agents in the history of psychology' and 'Outsiders inside: Positive marginality and social change.' Her theorizing and empirical research on women and marginality more generally, as well as her work on epistemology and qualitative research methods, have been challenging and ground-breaking and she has facilitated our understanding of each. Dr. Unger has been President of both Division 35 – Psychology of Women (1980-81) and the Society for the Psychological Study of Social Issues (SPSSI, 1998-99), and she is currently the editor of Analyses of Social Issues and Public Policy. In her presentation on 'Psychologists as social activists' Dr. Unger will examine why some psychologists become involved in efforts to create social change despite the potential professional costs associated with their social activism. To do so she will explore data from people who have been elected to leadership positions in SPSSI during the period 1936 – 2002. She will also discuss whether marginality can be related to commitment to social activism that extends beyond one's particular marginalized identity, and she will consider the epistemological, demographic and situational factors related to psychologists' social activism.

Section keynote speaker. The Section Keynote Speaker will be Joane Turgeon, a psychologist doing research with the Comité Priorité Violence Conjugale in Montréal, Québec. In her talk entitled 'La Victimasation Secondaire: Quand le Soutien Augmente la Souffrance,' Ms. Turgeon will report on the findings of research examining women's experiences of secondary victimization by those whom they turned to for support, including health care workers and psychologists. In keeping with the location of this year's convention, Joane will deliver her talk in French. There will be simultaneous translation into English, so even those of you who are linguistically limited, like me, can come to enjoy and learn.

Social event. Also worthy of note is the intention to have another SWAP social event at this year's convention. Although the exact time of the social is still undecided, the odds are good that it will be immediately after the Section Keynote Speaker. To be safe, keep your eyes open for the exact time because, with a bit of luck, this year's social will be even better than last year's!

Pre-Convention Institute: 'Qualitative Research and Women'

SWAP is sponsoring a pre-CPA convention institute, 'Qualitative Research and Women: Process and Content,' that will be held Wednesday June 8th, the day before the CPA Convention. The presentations in this full-day workshop will consider qualitative research methods and qualitative research findings relevant to women. There will be a mixture of papers, workshops, symposia and an invited speaker. The day will begin with the invited speaker, Dr. Frances Cherry, talking about Gordon and Ada Allport's Letters from Jenny and the difficulties in life history research then, as now. This will be followed by a series of one to two-hour 'how-to' workshops on methods of collecting (e.g., interviewing, participant observation, focus groups, q-methodology, action research, etc.) and analyzing qualitative data (e.g., grounded theory, discourse analysis, etc.), as well as other methodological issues (e.g., computer facilitated analysis, criteria for evaluating the quality of qualitative research, etc.). The remainder of the day will consist of presentations of the findings of qualitative research relevant to women. We hope that many of you will come out to the Institute, either as presenters or attendees. If any of you would like to submit a proposal for this institute, please do so – the more the merrier! The guidelines for submission appear elsewhere in this newsletter. Registration information for the Institute will appear in the upcoming issue of Psynopsis, and as usual the fees have been kept down to encourage attendance (i.e., $32 for students and $64 for CPA members). If any of you have any questions or comments, please feel welcome to send me an e-mail.

Elizabeth Church New CPA Director-at-Large

I am extremely happy that Dr. Elizabeth Church, SWAP's Outgoing Co-ordinator, was willing to take on and was awarded the position of Director-at-Large on CPA's Board of Directors. Elizabeth's outstanding publication, teaching and service record in regard to both psychology and women and clinical psychology make her an ideal person to sit on the Board. Having her on the Board will also be useful to women generally, and SWAP in particular, as I am confident that she will go out of her way to facilitate women's interests. So, congratulations and thank you Elizabeth! Cheerio, Connie K.

EDITOR'S MESSAGE

Hello everyone. This is the fourth newsletter that is being sent by e-mail and I have gotten some feedback about the new format. The three-column layout, which we have been using for years, is proving to be somewhat difficult to read on a computer screen. Some members do not have a printer or choose to save on paper and are finding the scrolling up and down annoying. I can definitely relate, as I have to scroll up and down numerous times to edit and reformat each issue. In order to remain consistent, I will continue with the three-column format for the remainder of volume 31 (one more issue), and then I will switch to a new layout for the first issue of volume 32 in September. I am thinking of keeping the first two pages, which contain SWAP executives' and provincial representatives' contact information in the three-column format, but changing to one column for the rest of the newsletter. This should make reading the articles easier for members who like to read it on the computer screen, but should not affect the readability of the newsletter on paper. If you have any ideas, advice, or suggestions for the new layout, please let me know.

I would also like to remind members that I would like to start a column of recently defended theses and dissertations. This would help showcase our growing student members' work and help connect members with similar interests. So, if you are a student who has recently defended your work please e-mail me a short abstract (150 –200 words). If you are faculty, please encourage your students to do this. And as always, if you have your own idea for a column, I would love to hear it. Also, please forward your calls for papers and other announcement to me via e-mail.

Please note that the deadline for the May newsletter is two weeks earlier than usual (April 15th). This is a one-time change because I need to finish the newsletter by the end of April due to other commitments in May, and not because I want to discourage members from submitting material for the newsletter. The usual deadline will resume for the September issue.

FEMINIST REVIEW

TRAFFICKING IN WOMEN IN CANADA: A CRITICAL ANALYSIS OF THE LEGAL FRAMEWORK GOVERNING IMMIGRANT LIVE-IN CAREGIVERS AND MAIL-ORDER BRIDES

pp. 220

Reviewed by:
Jennifer A. Boisvert, M.A.

From a feminist and intersectional perspective, this report provides a thorough analysis of the theoretical and legal framework governing two forms of trafficking women in Canada. The two forms of trafficking women analyzed in this report are: 1) immigrant live-in caregivers under the Live-in Caregiver Program (LCP); and 2) mail-order brides. For sake of feasibility, the report is formatted such that each of these forms is presented as separate chapters. This format brings to the fore dissimilarities and similarities of the above forms of trafficking women; this subtle contrast and comparison yields a feminist critique of the current situation concerning the trafficking of women in Canada. The thoroughness of this report as a critique of the current situation concerning the trafficking of women in Canada is evidenced in the range of topics and issues addressed throughout. This report examines federal and provincial legislation, presents caselaw literature, highlights issues of domestic violence, proposes reforms in governmental and legal areas to protect women's fundamental rights, and makes recommendations on national and international levels to eradicate the exploitation of women as persons – their bodies and abilities.

This report begins with a basic introduction to the subject of trafficking in women. This first section, titled "General Introduction: Research Parameters" clearly articulates the research approach and method of analysis to the subject of study. The concept of "trafficking in women" is defined and then commented on. The ensuing commentary is essentially an exploration and expansion of the definition of "trafficking in women" with the resultant outcome of drawing attention to feminist and intersectional considerations of this phenomena as a sociopolitical problem of our time. Following this introduction is the feminist theorization of what the authors' consider the "woman question" – the social circumstances and consequences to women involved in the trafficking industry. Rationale of the importance of taking a feminist perspective while conducting a legal analysis to identify better mechanisms, stakeholders, and ultimately, solutions to this problem is underscored. The international scale of this problem is acknowledged; it is stated that a comparative analysis of the regulation of trafficking in women is forthcoming in the document. Such a comparative analysis is deemed necessary to the subject of study given Canada's federal and bi-judicial system of common law and civil law. In all, this section well lays the foundation for subsequent chapters wherein the two forms of trafficking in women are directly examined and discussed.

The first chapter, "Chapter I: The Hiring of Immigrant Live-In Caregivers", consists of four sub-sections, each focusing on a separate facet of this form of trafficking in women. This chapter begins with a brief yet dense introduction which includes the following: the concept of immigrant live-in caregiver is defined; the methodology of the study is explained; how the division of federal and provincial legislation impacts immigrant live-in caregivers is noted; and the invisibility of immigrant live-in caregivers' work is discussed. Following this introduction are several chapter sub-sections. "Part I: The Live-In Caregiver Program" presents a general overview of the Canada immigration system and the operation of Canada's LCP program. This overview includes profiles of an immigrant live-in caregiver and her employer as well as the history and contemporary status of the LCP program. This overview is then followed by a critique and proposals for reform. The critique considers the following: weaknesses of the LCP program; arguments in favor of abolishing/retaining the program; recommendations for improving the program; and the usefulness of an action for infringement of women's equality rights. "Part II: Analysis of Labour Legislation Affecting Immigrant Live-In Caregivers" questions how legislation affects the immigrant live-in caregivers' employment. More specifically, how legislative discrepancies, statutes, and unequal labour standards affect immigrant live-in caregivers' working conditions. Several recommendations are made to ratify discriminatory employment practices and hence promote equality. Part III "Contractual Practices" briefly comments on the problems that presented themselves in seeking to study the contractual practices of immigrant live-in caregivers in Canada. This sub-section is followed by a chapter conclusion and the co-researcher's dissenting opinion regarding a single recommendation proposed in the chapter – that of the elimination of the LCP in Canada.

Turning the analysis of trafficking in women from the immigrant live-in caregiver situation as a social problem to the mail-order bride phenomenon: the second half of this document is devoted to examining this form of exploitation of women. The second chapter, "Chapter II: "Mail-Order Brides" in Canadian Law" begins with a brief introduction to the trend of the mail-order bride trade in Canada and abroad. It foreshadows a critical analysis of legality and government immigration policy associated with the mail-order bride industry, and offers a synopsis of chapter focus and format. As with the previous chapter, following this introduction are several sub-sections. "Part I: The Mail-Order Bride Phenomenon" paints a portrait of the "mail-order bride" phenomenon: the terminology and nature of the industry, and its history. Profiles of stakeholders in the industry such as brides-to-be and consumer-husbands are sketched along with the operations and profits of this industry. The issue of inequality be it sexual, cultural, or economical, and on a personal rather than a global scale, is spotlighted and addressed through several recommendations for reform. "Part II: The Legal Framework Governing the Mail-Order Bride Industry in Canada" analyzes from a legal standpoint, the complexities inherent in the unregulated business operations and laws of the mail-order bride industry. The legal spectrum of contractual, civil, and international law as well as disclaimer clauses, recourse options, and immigration rules is outlined with precision. Other relevant issues such as visa status and marital conditions including purposes of prostitution are noted, and recommendations with ramifications for Canadian immigration and protections for mail-order brides are made. This chapter concludes concisely and is followed by a final general conclusion that spans the content of the two chapters. This conclusion draws parallels between the two forms of trafficking in women and in doing so emphasizes the theme of the exploitation of women, and the violation of their fundamental rights as Canadian immigrants and importantly, as persons.

Supplementing the highly detailed information cited throughout the document are those literary and non-literary sources cited at its end as a reference section per se. While the bibliography is not extensive, it is informative. What is more impressive, however, is the extensive list of legal documentation that is specifically compiled for each of the two chapters. This documentation is referenced by typology as well as geography: articles, monographs, government publications, and internet sites are each cited under certain countries/continents, as well as international and women's rights organizations. All sources cited in this last section of the document would prove useful were one interested in learning more about laws applicable to one's home country or ways to become involved in protecting women's rights through advocacy.

Overall, this document presents a comprehensive and critical overview of trafficking in women as a conventional occupation as an immigrant live-in caregiver, and an unconventional position as a mail-order bride. The lens of this analysis blends feminist and legalist perspectives – a view that causes the reader to question and challenge the current state of affairs concerning the exploitation of women, and to consider trafficking in women an issue that demands further attention by government officials, policy makers, and women's rights activists, amongst others. Accordingly, this document would undoubtedly compliment the literary collection of many persons, the most notable being that of academicians, politicians, lawyers, and feminists. This document offers an enlightening view of two of the ways in which women are currently immigrating to Canada, and proposes equally enlightening recommendations for change that may potentially benefit future generations of Canadian women – immigrants and citizens alike.

SPECIAL ISSUE: WOMEN, TENURE, AND PROMOTION

Co-editors:

Dr. Ines Shaw and Dr. Sharon Leder, Nassau Community College, and Dr. Betty Harris, University of Oklahoma

After more than three decades of women's studies in the academy and a steady increase of women faculty in higher education across the disciplines, it is appropriate to take stock of what we have learned and what still needs to be accomplished. Contributors may consider the following:

- Status of Women and Changing the Structures: How can academic structures change so that a) women rise through and occupy all ranks in equal proportion to men, and are not stuck in the lowest ranks with the lowest salaries?

b) joint appointments and shared courses become regular systemic options?
 c) committees and administrations are monitored for accountability in promotion and tenure (p&t) decisions?
 d) campus Affirmative Action offices actively encourage, defend, and insure gender equity?

- Mentoring: What type of mentoring
 - a) really advances the attainment of p&t for all women?
 - b) helps service and activist contributions count for p&t?
- Student Evaluations/Faculty Ratings: What can counteract negative consequences of gender, race, and ethnic bias in student evaluations of women faculty in p&t decisions?
- Court Trends: How can knowledge of current trends in gender discrimination lawsuits prepare women for litigation?
- Tenure and Promotion Struggles and Denials:
 - a) What factors halt women faculty's paths to p&t?
 - b) How may criteria for p&t change so that teaching and service scholarship count as "real" scholarship?
 - c) How may criteria change so that interdisciplinary, feminist and activist work count toward p&t?

d) What roles do personal and family life play in women's struggles to gain p&t?
 e) How are women's physical and mental health, financial status and professional life affected by denials of p&t, and by strategies they employ in response?
 f) What are the financial, educational, and human costs of not tenuring or promoting women faculty?

A 150-word abstract should be submitted with a completed essay of 20–30 pages, including abstract, notes, and references--Two copies to:

THE SIXTH ANNUAL INTERNATIONAL ADVANCES
IN QUALITATIVE METHODS CONFERENCE

February 17-19, 2005
Fantasyland Hotel, West
Edmonton Mall

With a focus on diversity and cutting-edge methodologies and techniques, the AQM conference provides an outlet to present work on the methodological aspects of qualitative research projects, an aspect of research dissemination that usually occupies only a small portion of a research report.

Topics of presentations range from traditional methods such as ethnography to postmodern methods such as discourse analysis, and cover all phases of the research from proposal writing and research design, through data collection and analysis, to issues of dissemination. Issues as old as ethics or as new as the role of technology in research are covered. This diversity is also evident in the mode of presentation: AQM participants regularly present papers and posters, plays and poems, video and photography, and even there have even been quilts.

When Women Gain, So Does the World

IWPR'S EIGHTH INTERNATIONAL WOMEN'S POLICY RESEARCH CONFERENCE

The Institute for Women's Policy Research (IWPR) with co-sponsors
The Women's Studies Program at the George Washington University and the Friedrich Ebert Foundation, Washington Office
June 19-21, 2005
Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, DC.

IWPR will hold its Eighth International Women's Policy

Research Conference, When Women Gain, So Does the World on June 20-21, 2005, at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, DC. The conference will be held in conjunction with the Research Network on Gender, Politics and State (RNGS). For more information on RNGS, visit their website at <http://libarts.wsu.edu/polisci/rngs>.

The conference theme centers around the reality that investing in women's status globally is important not only for women themselves, but is critical to the economic and social well-being of entire communities, institutions, and nations. For example, improving women's economic opportunities promotes community health; women's equality in the labor force leads to better business outcomes; and advancing women's leadership holds the possibility to transform public policy. IWPR invites policymakers, advocates, researchers, and practitioners from academia, labor unions, business, government, non-profits and NGOs, and the media to our international conference to share information and discuss policy strategy that can be used to improve the programs and policies around the world that protect and promote women and girls.

For further information, please visit our website at www.iwpr.org, or contact IWPR's Conference Fellow, Elizabeth Mandeville, at conference@iwpr.org or (202) 785-5100.
