The Department of Educational Psychology, University of Alberta, invites applications for two tenure-track positions at the rank of Assistant Professor in the area of Counseling Psychology (CP), focusing on human rights, social and racial justice, and/or diversity.

Applicants must have earned a doctorate in Counseling Psychology or Clinical Psychology from a major research university by July 1, 2021, or shortly thereafter. Applicants must also be eligible for registration with the College of Alberta Psychologists. We seek to recruit Black scholars, scholars of Colour, and/or LGBTQ2+ scholars with a strong research focus and/or practical expertise related to human rights, social and racial justice, and/or diversity. The successful candidates must demonstrate research and/or practical expertise in at least one of the following areas, as they apply to professional practice in psychology: (a) the social contexts of mental health and well-being in marginalized communities; (b) equity, diversity, and inclusion in professional psychological practice; and (c) advancing social and racial justice in counselling psychology. In addition, expertise in psychological assessment is strongly preferred. A background in clinical supervision and/or ethics would also be an asset.

The successful candidates will be expected to supervise graduate students and involve them in their program of research. Full consideration will be given to all applicants who meet the criteria listed above. Applicants who are graduates of a(n) CPA or APA accredited program are especially encouraged to apply.

The CP doctoral program has been accredited by the Canadian Psychological Association since 2000. The mission of the program is to provide students with theoretical foundations, research, and professional training from a scientist-practitioner model in preparation for a career involving research and/or professional psychological practice with adults and families in a variety of settings. Students in the program study full-time and many go on to receive Tri-Council funding and other prestigious awards. Importantly, 100% of graduates become employed in their disciplines after graduation, working in hospitals, universities, schools, and private practice all over Canada.
