Nature and Scope of Work

The Department of Psychology invites applications for Regular Full-Time Faculty to begin August 1, 2021. Two positions are available, with the possibility of a third. We seek candidates whose teaching and professional interests and activities relate to our shared commitment to an academic model that embeds leadership skills, innovation, region-integrated learning, and applied learning opportunities in authentic and interactive settings.

The successful applicants will join a group of scholars who share a commitment to readying our students for dynamic career trajectories that build their capacities to innovate and lead, while developing self and social awareness. We have 4 years of courses that cover a breadth of psychology specialties, with a focus throughout on learning outcomes explicitly shaped by APA guidelines. Our students are invited to experience work integrated learning and to participate in research in collaboration with faculty. We operate on a collegial model, with shared decision-making and planning at the departmental level, and we do best with cooperation, camaraderie, and sharing of service work. We are committed to anti-oppressive practices and decolonizing methodologies, and to embedding Indigenous knowledge in our courses through work with knowledge keepers and elders.

Courses may be in-person, online, or hybrid.
