

Vancouver Island University invites applications for a full-time, permanent faculty position as a Psychology Faculty Member.

We seek applicants who share our passion for high-quality undergraduate education and can skillfully infuse their teaching with their scholarly work. As an open-access institution, VIU welcomes a wide range of students, many of whom are first-generation learners in a post-secondary environment. We offer both a BSc and BA Psychology degree option. Course descriptions and more information about the Psychology Department can be found here. The successful candidates will mentor undergraduate students in research and scholarly activity.

Instruction includes the preparation and delivery of lectures, assessment and evaluation of students, facilitation of students' learning, and provision of student support during office hours. The successful candidate will also be expected to apply departmental norms for evaluating student learning in psychology and will participate in a wide range of activities inside and outside of the classroom, including student support, institutional, faculty, and departmental committee meetings, research, and other initiatives and professional activities in keeping with their disciplines.

The successful candidate will be required to teach eight sections per academic year. Full-time faculty members who teach upper-level courses receive one (1) section of release time per year.

Required Qualifications:

- A Ph.D. or equivalent in psychology from an APA or CPA-accredited institution.
- Experience in successfully teaching courses in one or more of the following areas: experimental/clinical neuropsychology, or lifespan development, cognition and/or research methods.
- Experience (through research and/or teaching activity) to support success in teaching a broad range of psychology content.
- Enthusiasm and ability to successfully teach introductory psychology.
- An established research program that complements the interests and expertise of current faculty.
- Active ongoing participation in professional development activities.
- Demonstrated proficiency with technology relevant to the position.
- Ability to meet the needs of a diverse student population.
